Editage has partnered with Cabells to provide manuscript preparation services to authors through Cabells Editing Services.

Online PR News - 07-June-2016 - Editage has partnered with Cabells to provide manuscript preparation services to authors through Cabells Editing Services. Editage, a leader in English-language editing and publication support services, will make available services such as English-language editing, journal submission, and technical reviews.

We are delighted to be partnering with Editage to provide new services to our users, explained Lacey Earle, Vice President, Business development, at Cabells International. She continued: Many researchers are doing great scientific work but are encumbered by formatting issues and language barriers. Providing a good way for these researchers to get past such issues will open up more publishing opportunities for them, thereby helping to get the right research into the hands of those who can use it best.

Donald Samulack, President, US Operations, at Editage stated. For career success, it is so important these days that an author not only selects the right journal to publish in, but that the manuscript is well written and easy to understand. By using the author services offered by Cabells and Editage, a researcher optimizes the value offered by both companies and increases the likelihood of successfully publishing their scholarly works in a timely manner. Readability, comprehension, and scholarly value go hand-in-hand. At Editage, we pay very close attention to the subject matter of a manuscript, and make it our mission to support the author through a variety of services geared at optimizing the potential of publication success. We feel that a well-written, well-edited paper can lead to the acceleration of scientific progress, and we strive toward that goal.

Cabells Editing Services will be available to all authors, regardless of where they wish to publish. A range of pricing and delivery time options will ensure that authors can choose the level of assistance that best suits their needs.
