Learn how to improve beyond the traditional process of automation with IndustrialCOOP's buying guide

Online PR News â€“ 11-December-2009 â€“ Tuscon, Arizona IndustrialCOOP, a co-op industrial search engine and division of ILG (Industrial Leaders Group) revealed this morning its new directory and marketplace for companies looking to buy and sell automation systems and equipment at <http://www.dir.industrialcoop.com/index.php?c=441> The company's officials reported to the media the newly revised site now includes a broader variety of factory robots, controls, conveyors, assembly systems and other automated equipment for the factory floor.

Â

According to IndustrialCOOP spokeswoman Meghan Johnson, the site provides access to a specialized directory of powerful and reliable automation controls, software, turnkey automated systems, robotics and components as well as automatic material handling systems and other new generation automation solutions for manufacturing applications at http://www.industrialleaders.com/listings/automation_equipment.html Johnson said the site is used as a buying guide for engineers and others in the market for such products.

Â

Contract manufacturers, job shops and other manufacturing companies looking to drive operation and production costs down through lean manufacturing while obtaining faster returns will find IndustrialCOOP to be a valuable resource, says Johnson. She concluded, The site enables companies to find and compare suppliers of dedicated and flexible custom automation systems, high quality controls, innovative robots, factory floor computers, automated assembly equipment and allied products for a wide range of manufacturing industries.
