Â

The 2012 Australian Open is taking place in Melbourne Park, Melbourne Australia. This historic occasion, which represents the 100th anniversary of the Australian Open, runs from the 16th of January until the Sunday the 29th of January.

Â

Its also the first Grand Slam of the year and as such has attracted the worlds best battling for their share of the $26million (AUD) in prize money, including number one ranked Mens Singles player Novak Djokovic who won the event last year, and defending Australian Open champion Kim Clijsters. Both of whom are still in contention as of the 21st of January.

Â

One match thats attracting attention amongst the locals involves the Mens Singles meet Lleyton Hewitt vs. Milos Raonic, which takes place at 7pm Sydney time at the Rod Laver Arena as round three.

Â

A match that involves youth verse experience and power verse determination, with both players seeking to make history. Milos Raonic by winning his first ever Grand Slam, and Lleyton Hewitt by winning his first ever Australian Open back on home soil.

Â

The 21 year-old Milos Raonic of Canada, ranked 23rd in the world, defeated Philipp Petzschner 6-4, 5-7, 6-2, 7-5 behind a thundering serve and aggressive play.

Â

The soon to be 32 year-old local favourite Lleyton Hewitt of Australia, ranked 181st in the world, defeated Andy Roddick 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 when Roddick retired due to injury.

Â

Milos Raonics best singles performance was a 4th round loss in the 2011 Australian Open. Since turning pro in 2008, Raonics played in a total 65 matches, winning 39. His 23rd ranking is the highest of his career.

Â

By comparison Lleyton Hewitt was ranked first in the world for a period eighty weeks at the turn of the century, has won two Grand Slam titles (US Open and Wimbledon) and participated in the Australian Open fourteen times including scoring runner-up in 2005.

Â

Milos Raonic is the favourite to win, with Australian Open odds for this match in the $1.30 range, while Lleyton Hewitts win odds are in the $3.70 range.
