Online PR News "23-January-2012" San Diego, CA, After firmly establishing its presence in Americas finest city, San Diego, California College San Diego has expanded its reach by opening a new branch campus in San Marcos, California.

Â

Also known as a satellite campus, a branch campus is a facility thats detached from the main campus of a college and is usually smaller in size.

Â

The purpose of a branch campus is to cater to students who cannot travel too far away from their homes to attend school due to their other commitments. Typically, a branch campus offers the same programs that are available at the main campus of a college.

Â

Located in northern San Diego County, California College San Diegos impressive three-story structure at San Marcos is equipped with six classrooms, one laboratory, four interview rooms, and several administrative offices.

Â

In addition to these facilities, students at San Marcos have also been provided with a Wi-Fienabled study lounge, complete with computer systems set up exclusively for their use. In fact, the entire campus has been Wi-Fi enabled for the convenience of the students.

Â

Currently, the San Marcos facility offers a range of associates and bachelors programs in business, healthcare, and information technology. Some of the popular programs available at this branch campus include:

Â

- AOS in Business Management and Accounting
- AOS in Medical Specialties
- AOS in Computer Programming
- BS in Accounting
- BS in Business Administration
- BS in Healthcare Administration
- BS in Computer Science
- BS in Nursing Administration

Â

The typical length of an associates degree at California College San Diego is 15 to 20 months, while that of a bachelors program is 30 to 36 months. Some of these programs are also available online through California College San Diegos affiliate Stevens-Henager College, Salt Lake City/Murray, Utah.
