

Infosec Technologies in the running for Network Computing Reseller of the Year

Online PR News â€“ 01-February-2012 â€“ Infosec Technologies, a leading IT networking and security reseller, has been shortlisted for this years Network Computing Awards. About 100 companies were entered for the Network Computing Reseller of the Year Award, with only eight making the shortlist.

Â

The Network Computing Awards were set up to recognise the hardware, software and services, and of course the companies behind them, which have most impressed the readers of Network Computing, the UKs longest established computer networking publication.

Â

The nominations process has enabled Network Computing to create short lists of finalists in a number of categories. On-line voting on the magazines website will now ultimately determine the winners. The Awards will be presented in late March at a formal Dinner in London.

Â

Pete Sherwood, Managing Director, Infosec Technologies commented: To achieve this support from our customers and partners in the IT industry is fantastic. After a very successful five years in business, being shortlisted for this award is great recognition of the teams hard work.

Â

Infosec Technologies supplies innovative technologies to provide ever stronger, more resilient and agile IT networking and security solutions. The companys clients span every business sector; from government to pharmaceuticals, financial to ISP, retail and charity.

Â

About Infosec Technologies:

Founded in 2005, Infosec Technologies is run by its two founders Pete Sherwood and Steven Malone. Having proven themselves as technical experts in the field of IT Networking and Security they launched Infosec Technologies as a technically-led reseller with a mandate to not only keep their clients secure, but to enable them to maximise the benefits of their investment in security and networking technology and thereby help to minimise both risk and costs.
