The song and video bring to light the issue of abuse in many forms, although symbolized by physical abuse in this video. The message of the song and video is one of hope and strength encouraging listeners in this situation to reach out for help.

^

Frontman Robert Michaels continues to showcase his unique lyrical style in this piece and says, "I grew up in an abusive environment and carried the scars for many years. I wrote this song not as a catharsis but to give strength to the abused in whatever form that may be in their lives."

^

Director Jennifer Hepler says "The honesty and vulnerability of these lyrics is what drew me to the song once I heard it the first time, I knew I had to be involved in some way in creating this video."
