In order to be able to safely and securely accept and send sensitive information through a website, it is extremely important that information is encrypted when it is being sent back and forth from your site visitor and your website. The reason why this is so important is because it is extremely easy for anyone to eavesdrop and steal sensitive data while the data is being transmitted back and forth.

Â

An SSL certificate is installed on a website, and each time a visitor browses a section of your website encrypted over SSL, a public key is sent by the server to your visitors Web browser. This public key is used to encrypt data before it is sent to the website your client is browsing, and vice versa. Once an encrypted connection is established and verified, all data transmitted both ways are encrypted.

Â

Robert King, Managing Director, eUKhost Ltd. said, SSL certificates are a very important part of business online because they provide the necessary layer of security and trust to ensure sensitive data is transmitted and received securely and safely from client to server, and vice versa. These savings will be very much welcomed and appreciated by our business customers who may be needing to either purchase a new, or renew an existing, SSL certificate with us.

Â

SSL certificates are one means to protect users from fraudsters trying to con them into handing over valuable usernames and passwords or other identifying information. SSL certificates verify sites and provide consumers with confidence that the site they visit is the site they think it is, and not, for example, a spoof site set up for the express purpose of harvesting their credit card information.

Â

As part of the company's limited-time promotions, AlphaSSL certificates will be available for 24 a year and Extended SSL certificates for just 249 a year. The company also announced 20 off Alpha SSL and Organization SSL Wildcard options, and emphasized each SSL certificate includes a free Dedicated IP; negating the need for customers to purchase one separately for an extra fee.
