One of Europe's favorite social yellow pages communities goes west, launching their US local search in partnership with CityGrid Media.

Online PR News â€“ 14-September-2010 â€“ In a reversal of the usual practice of startups expanding from the US into Europe, Tupalo.com (<http://tupalo.com/>) has crossed the Atlantic in the other direction. Having recently teamed up with CityGrid Media (<http://www.citygridmedia.com>), a new local media company connecting the millions of businesses and customers on the local web, Tupalo already has over 1 million business listings across the USA, and is adding tens of thousands more on a daily basis.

Â

Discovering, sharing and reviewing local businesses - whether restaurants in Houston (<http://tupalo.com/en/houston-texas/c/restaurant>), bars in NYC (<http://tupalo.com/en/new-york-city/c/nightlife>), bakeries in Chicago (<http://tupalo.com/en/chicago-illinois/c/bakery>) or antique shops in LA (<http://tupalo.com/en/los-angeles-california/c/antiques>) - has never been easier. Tupalo.com offers the ultimate in US city guides built by people in the know and on the go.

Â

Launching in the US is not only a logical step for Tupalo as it continues to grow beyond its European heartlands but also a kind of homecoming for the company, one of whose co-founders, CEO Michael Borrás, is an American currently living in Vienna, Austria.

Â

Speaking from the Directional Media Strategies 2010 conference in Dallas, Borrás said, "The US is a key market for local search, so we are partnering with flagship companies such as CityGrid Media that share our core values and vision. Tupalo is committed to an organic, all-inclusive approach, and we look forward to forging positive relationships with users, consumers, businesses and other partners throughout the USA."
