Feathers In The Wind

Author Joins the AJC Decatur Book Festival 2017 with Feather in the Wind

Online PR News "10-August-2017" From 1 to 3 September 2017 Lynn Case, author of Feathers In The Wind will be joining this year's AJC Decatur Book Festival, a community-based, non-profit event and largest independent festival in the country. Being renowned as one of the five largest festivals in the country, DBF continues to gather world-class authors as well as hundreds of thousands of festival-goers to enjoy book signings, author readings, panel discussions, an interactive children's area, live music, parade, cooking demonstrations, poetry slams, writing workshops, and others. These activities will be happening in and around the historic downtown Decatur square.

Â

"We always knew Atlanta had a thriving writing and book community, but it needed a centerpiece to bring all the parts together", Tom Bell points out as he recalls the history of DBF. It was when Daren Wang hatched a hare-brained idea to establish a festival celebrating the spoken/written word that brought the other dreamers and believers together. Tom Bell founding program director, Linda Harris, Richard Lenz, Alice Murray, Bill Starr and Judy Turner then began brewing the magic.

Â

The DBF got rave reviews shortly after 18 months of hard work and dedication in volunteering full-time, until its commencement over Labor Day weekend back in 2006, which was attended by over 100 authors and 50,000 people. The success of the event was contributed by the combination of supportive local businesses and restaurants, eager and able volunteers, and the ability to walk easily from venue to venue.

Lynn Case was born in Baytown, Texas. A southern girl at heart, she has lived most of her life in California. She enjoys traveling with her husband and she has visited eight states in the U.S. She also enjoys cooking for her family, and while she is not doing her most favorite things, she writes stories. Being a private person, she had kept her writing for quite a while until finally she was encouraged to publish her first novel, Fears Revenge in 2013. Now she makes a comeback in the literary limelight with Feathers In The Wind, the fourth and the final title in the series of four college. The story commences when Catherine Dumont marries S.J. Worthington and becomes a socialite trophy wife. Her husband who is an older financial dynamo dies unexpectedly of a heart attack. A twist comes for Catherine when she moves to Wyoming to start a new life and pursue her college dream of having a dude ranch in that area, while letting a New York detective investigate on the possible murder case of her late husband. She encounters a terrible situation when a cattle slaughters escalates in the area. This raises to a suspicion that Catherine might be the ultimate target. Will the mystery be solved?

Â

BookBlastPro will represent the author at the AJC Decatur Book Festival. The festival-goers and other authors will have the opportunity of getting first-hand information about Case and her piece, Feathers In The Wind. They will also get bookmarks and an opportunity of photo documentation which will be released after the event. The book selling will be announced at the event.

Â

AJC Decatur Book Festival Bookzilla, Lynn Cases book and the rest of the fun activities will make this event a literary powerhouse that will delight the attendees and will make this annual event a huge success, as what Tom Bell expressed: "That's what the festival does best."
